WRESTLING TAKES OFF

This year's goal for wrestling is simple: "To get better every day and wrestle our best contest when districts arrive," said Scott Shannon, wrestling coach and health teacher.

Other wrestling coaches include Justin Peeler, middle school PE teacher; Stu Burgess, history teacher; graduates Madison Loveland, and Audrey Castello.

The team finished fourth at the district tournament and second in the Sky-Em league. The team also had two state champs: graduates, Zane Wardwell and Audrey Castello. Runner ups were graduates: Matt Engholm, Daniel McClennen, Morgan Craig, and Evan Cochran.

To improve from last year, Shannon plans to focus on take downs and being more aggressive on their feet. Shannon also recognizes that there is not as much experience on the team this year as there was last year because of all the new members. "... but if we buy into getting better every day, we can get some good results." Shannon said.

"I decided to join this year's team to continue doing the sport that I fell in love with last year," said Christina Cazimero, jr. "I love the adrenaline rush"

Sabina Botello, soph., along with Anna Marshall, soph., decided to come out for wrestling because they enjoy competing and the intensity of wrestling. Botello said that she gets mental strength.

Marshall gets a good feeling during the day when looking forward to wrestling practice. She appreciates working out and getting for with a large group of people. They both agree that it does take up a lot of their free time and weekend because of practices and tournaments.

A typical practice consists of "Running, running, and more running," said Dale Miller, sr.; or more accurately, stair laps, certain cross fit workouts (with stair laps in between), and working on takedowns, or a new move with a partner.

Dale Miller has been wrestling for seven years. He likes the individuality and learning discipline. He decides to join this year's team because he simply loves the sport.

He admits that there are sacrifices, like eating. Miller needs to monitor and lose weight in order to stay in his weight class and be able to participate.

Wrestlers have to weigh themselves before and after practice. Weight is an important part of wrestling because it determines who you will wrestle against. It is important to weigh yourself often because your weight fluctuates.

Adopt-a-family helps others

Adopt-a-family is an informal initiative that our school does to help out families in our district. Adopt-a-family was started many years ago by the Leadership Class, but it was handed over to Honor Society and Key Club.

Fifth period classes are assigned a family member and collect gifts for that specific member.

These people are not fictional, but families from one of the schools in the Fern Ridge district. Christmas, hopefully, will be happier for these families due to the generosity of EHS students.

Most of the time, the gifts are delivered directly to the families. Honor Society coordinates it all and wraps all the gifts with a "wrap-party" before going on winter break. Key Club helps out, and most of the gifts are kept with Doncella Marquesses, art teacher and Key Club adviser.

This year, ten family members will be helped, so two fifth period classes will share one person.

Elmira High School will ask each school to provide a list of names and gifts the individual's desire; classes are then able buy gifts for the family member.

The classes with the most money in gifts win, receiving a pizza party. Last year, Jennifer Snider, Spanish teacher, won with a few hundred dollars

Even with all the other fundraisers going on at school, in the past classes bring in an average of $80-$120 worth of gifts.

"Our student body is very giving," said Forrest Cooper, math and Honor Society adviser.

S.A.N.T.A project benefits over 200 families

This year, the SANTA project continues its 23rd year of gift giving to the children who might not receive gifts otherwise. The SANTA acronym stands for Sharing Among Neighbors Toy Appeal; families in the Fern Ridge District or Crow-Applegate District are legible to receive gifts.

Last year, 224 families and 603 children (ages zero through 18) were given gifts. Each year, many children can get various types of gifts through the SANTA project including coats, bikes, helmets, new toy donations and the volunteers worked hard to clean and repair the toys. News of the new project was printed in the local newspaper to get people informed to donate.

The first present giveaway did not take place at the Veneta Elementary, but instead at the old NAPA building. There were no tables to set gifts on at that time, so the gifts were set on the floor. During the second year, there were tables.

But on the third year, the SANTA teering as well as providing hot beverages for the people waiting in line for toys.

Local businesses also provide for the project. Sanipac donates bicycles, the Fire Department donates helmets, Rays Food Place supplies shopping bags for people to carry their gifts in and the food for the lunches provided during the gift giveaway. VSW, a women's auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, then prepares all of the food for the lunches.

The 20-30 club provides about 1/2 of the coats given out during the program. This year, the club has donated about 240 coats out of approximately 350 donated altogether.

There is a budget the project has each year use to go out and buy extra gifts. The budget is earned through fundraising and the project generally earns about 9,000 to 10,000 dollars to use for the SANTA project.

Members of the project all volunteer their time. Nobody is paid for it. "I have wonderful volunteers," said Nichols.

This year the gift giveaway will take place on Sat. Dec. 19, 2015 in the gym at the Veneta Elementary School from nine to four. Set up will occur the day before.

No children are allowed to be present during the gift giveaway. "We don't want any of the children to be embarrassed because some people discriminate," said Brooker. All people going to the gift giveaway will register before entering, saying in which district they live in and how many children they have. Then, for each child, the parent will receive two tickets with which to use to trade for gifts. One ticket will get one gift, no matter the type or age group.

books, and other toys.

But what inspired this program?

In 1991, Inez Brooker, co-founder of the SANTA project, was inspired to start the project. She was helping out at the food drive and handing out books to people who wanted one when a man brought a bunch of toys from Goodwill to be handed out with the books and food. Many of the toys were not in the best condition, but the families getting food still checked out the toys, some taking them home to be given to their children for Christmas. "Some of [the people] were in tears," said Brooker.

After that experience, Brooker got her friend, Sally Staulding on board with the idea of gift giving charity. And the following year, in 1992, the SANTA project began. During the first year, the SANTA project accepted both used and organization became more organized and began to use the Veneta Elementary School gym. To this day, the gift giveaway is held there.

Brooker is now retired from the SANTA organization, but she still helps out. For about twenty years, Lydia Schauer was president of the program and last year, due to illness, Alice Nichols took over as president. This year will be Nichols first official giveaway as president of the SANTA project.

There are many people who contribute by donating to the SANTA organization. The Free Souls Motorcycle Club (FSMC) collects the money for the project once a year. They also donate to the organization. "We've gotten 7,000 dollars from them before," said Nichols.

TERROR ATTACKS IN WESTERN HEMISPHERE SHED LIGHT ON SCOPE OF ISIS THREAT

Over the past several months, the Islamic State spreading through Iraq and Syria has taken further steps toward war with the west. Despite the development of a centralized provisional government, it has also shown its capacity as a global terror syndicate. Terror cells and attacks around the world have been linked to ISIS, either through investigation or direct confession. The threat has been growing since the summer of 2014, when Iraq fell to the rebel force born from the ashes of Al Qaeda. For over a year, the fledgling Caliphate focused its energy on the surrounding territories. After its violent foundation in the unstable Middle East, its tendrils have reached into the western world.

On Nov. 13, a series of six attacks occurred in Paris, France, killing 130 people. The attacks were carried out by nine men, consisting of four suicide bombers and five riflemen. Investigation revealed that all known attackers were EU citizens, some of whom had recently travelled to Syria and returned as radicalized operatives. Upon apprehension, one suspect openly admitted to being an ISIS operative.

On Dec. 2, Syed Farook and Tashfeen Malik, his wife, opened fire with assault rifles and pistols at a company Christmas party in San Bernardino, California. The attack killed 14. Farook, a U.S. citizen, and Malik, a Pakistani national, were pursued from the crime scene in an SUV. The subsequent shootout with police left the married couple dead. Further investigation of the suspects' vehicle, property, and persons placed 1,600 rounds of ammunition with them, as well as 4,500 rounds and multiple pipe bombs and improvised explosive devices (IEDs) in their home. According to Fox News contributor Catherine Herridge, such an operation takes extensive funding and specific training. While the source of their funding is still under investigation, a closer look at their social media sites revealed that Malik had recently pledged allegiance to the Islamic State and Farook had recently made contact with members of multiple terror organizations.

In addition to multinational attacks, ISIS also continues to execute countless foreign nationals members of non-Islamic religions on ISIS controlled soil. The specific targeting of Christians and Jews has left the Abrahamic religions at odds with each other. The executions, which have included American, British, French, and Russian, citizens, have galvanized multiple competing nations against a common foe. The United Kingdom, Russia, France, and Turkey have all declared war on ISIS, regularly bombing their assets, ordinance, and strongholds.

Leaders of ISIS have continuously encouraged their followers to wage war wherever they are, and they have proven their ability to do so. While national security is adjusting to the threat, the threat is still very real.

IGNORANCE IS BLISS; MAY PROVE HELPFUL

Ignorance really is bliss. Not knowing sometimes means not worrying, because knowing about something could be rather concerning or upsetting. What is not known will not hurt, even if the truth is dubious.

“Living is easy with eyes closed,” is a famous quote by John Lennon that reinstates how being uninformed on something won’t hurt.

Being ignorant does not necessarily mean stupidity; it just means choosing what is wanted to know in life. There is a difference between ignorance and not wanting to learn. Ignorance means not wanting to know the things that don’t matter, such as the controversial topics of insults or favorite things.

Ignorance can be used as an advantage, just so long it’s not abused. Using ignorance as an advantage could be acting ignorant, which comes across as being “dumb,” though it’s probably not true. Acting ignorant can allow for “getting off the hook,” therefore an advantage for many so-called “ignorant” people.

Being ignorant can also boost self-esteem. By not knowing what those “rude insults” mean, you could think that they mean something positive, therefore, boosting confidence.

As children, people don’t have the burdens that adults have; children don’t have the relentless burdens that come with responsibility and awareness of the hardships and complexities in life. Adults and parents keep knowledge away from children that may harm them, or that may be too difficult to understand. In this process that adults go through, children are better off. Knowledge that they don’t have to know will, in turn, be best.

Point and Counter Point

A child who has experienced a hardship or a complexity in their life will be more emotional than an unknowing child. If a child is aware of the harsh society we live in, it will hurt them. On the other hand, a child who is uninformed of the hurtful realities of the world will be happier and more optimistic.

Many people will ask this multiple times in their life: “You were better off not knowing that, weren’t you?” and only on very rare occasions the reply will be “no.” It is natural for humans to want to know something; it is a primal instinct; however, there will almost always have a negative reaction or effect.

So think about it, is knowledge actually power in a sometimes heartbreaking, eroding, belligerent journey that we call life?

- By Desirea Collins

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER; MAY HELP COPING SKILLS

Sometimes knowing what is unknown can cause a lot of pain. But not knowing something may cause hurt also. In that case, how can one’s ignorance cause bliss? The unknowledgeable have no experience with handling the pain dealt in life, and learning how to cope with stress, pain, and the bad aspects of life is key. Knowledge is truly power.

Firstly, knowledge is needed to get anywhere in life. It is needed to get a job, move on to college, and deal with situations. Without knowledge, a person may not have enough experience to get a job, or if they wish, to go to college. So knowledge is important in that it teaches people to know how to handle situations in day to day life. For example, if a person asks his friend how to handle the death of a close one and the friend is unable to answer due to his ignorance in the topic, and then no support will be given to the friend. It would be helpful to know how to assist people who need comfort after being dealt news carrying pain; after all, not everyone is ignorant to things occurring around him.

Some people are scared of knowing because they are afraid that the truth may hurt them. People, however, need to know how to handle pain. They need to know the emotional hurt that comes from knowing the hurtful things because it will make it easier in the future to handle painful and emotional situations. It will also help so that shocking, painful news isn’t so hard to take. Altogether, it would be better to know ahead of time than find out the bad news when it is too late or too hard to accept.

As an example, imagine someone spreading rumors about someone. Would that person rather know the things being said about them, or would they rather have the rumors stay hidden? It is understandable not to want to be hurt by the unkind words that person is spreading, but what if people begin to believe what was said? Then people could be left in the dust, not understanding why all of a sudden people are treating them differently.

Overall, it is good to be knowledgeable of the things happening in the world, good and bad. After someone has been hurt, he begins to learn how to handle the painful situation and he begins to take bad news easier. Those who are ignorant hide in cowardice from the bad things in life.

So I ask that it is considered whether knowing or not knowing is better. But keep in mind, that knowledge is power when learning to cope with situations and life in general.

-By Jessica Coone

Bird’s Eye View: Is knowledge power or is ignorance bliss?

Treshaun Johnson, fr
“Knowledge is power because if you’re ignorant, it won’t get you anywhere.”

Ashley Burke, soph
“Knowledge is power because through knowledge it helps ourselves in the evolutionary process which ultimately is our goal to become the invincible species.”

Vincent Robbins, jr.
“Knowledge is power because more knowledge means more power and the more you know the more successful you can be.”

Corbie Johnson, sr.

HOLIDAYS CONQUER VARIOUS BELIEFS

Are holidays good or bad? Here are some thoughts from Elmira students:

“I think holidays are just peachy. They seem quiet boring, and seems like it lasts forever. But hey, there’s food,” said Devin Groshang, soph.

Although Devin believes they’re peachy, not everyone agrees.

“They’re pretty great, I guess,” said Amanda Mo-gensen, soph.

Even if some people think they are just all right, some maximize holiday spirit.

“I personally love the holidays especially Christmas. I like how everyone is happy, and how are there those all cookies. I also like the holiday season because that’s when basketball starts, and that’s one of my favorite sports,” said Jadenn Blunt, soph.

Others love time off from school.

“I think they’re good because one gets a break,” said Nolan Moore. Will Weaver, jr, agreed.

Two people agree that the break is great but Josh Voyles, sr., doesn’t like missing friends.

“Overall, holidays are good. We’re given time to take a break from our stressful lives to celebrate and have fun. As we grow older the glamour fades; however, and they become a waste of time or unimportant. I enjoy time off school, but not spending time away from friends,” said Voyles.

From boring to loving the holidays fills the air with feelings. This season could be good or bad, depending on one’s experiences.

Congratulations Charlie Brown for Fifty Years on TV

Dec. 9, 1965, Charlie Brown first came out. CBS is where it first aired, but now it is on ABC family due to purchase rights.

The 50th anniversary of Charlie Brown special already aired on November 30, 2015. More airings of Charlie Brown will be on Dec. 19th and 24th, 2015.

All the voices of the kids were kids who lived in the director’s neighborhood. Some of the child actors were so young they couldn’t even read the script. Charlie Brown Christmas is the second longest running Christmas special. The first is Rudolph the Red Nose Reindeer.

Open up; others will open up to you

 Sagittarius November 22 – December 21: Very unemotional and independent, both are strong and yet very lonely. Now, you might be saying that you aren't like that, but dude, you are so in denial. Find something or someone special to help you feel so to speak. You need to learn how to open up to other people. Open up and others will open up to you.

 Capricorn December 22 – January 19: Dictatorial isn't such a bad trait, to be honest. You are responsible compared to others and you like to get the job done. Don't be afraid to let others help out with stuff, such as school work and personal stuff. Patience, young padawan.

 Aquarius January 20 – February 19: Do you know what is pretty stupid about your element? You are an Aquarian who is a water bearer, and your element is Air; that is pretty stupid if you ask me. Either A: Your element accidentally got mixed up with some other Zodiac sign or B: It just was meant to throw people into an outrage. Any who, just be original just like your Zodiac sign name and element. Don't be like anyone else, be just you and your life will show so many opportunities.

 Pisces February 19 –

March 20: Tis the season to be jolly for you. You might be going through a lot right now, but you just need to learn to let go. Jumping through hoops isn't a good thing. Running around for other people won't get you anywhere in life unless it is your family or friends who are going through a tough time, be there for them and be their rock that they desperately need. Help those who need you and in time they will help you too.

 Gemini May 21 – June 20:

boss. Be you, not anyone else.

 Aries March 21 – April 19: Strong, outgoing, and completely stubborn, don't let those strong traits control you. Use them to your advantage. Show others that you are strong by not caring what they say or do to you. Be outgoing and yourself, don't back down when others judge you. Be stubborn and do not back down to people who have ill intentions. Following your gut is most important.

 Taurus April 20 – May 20: Being loyal is very important to those who need someone to lean on, to share their secrets with. You being a Taurus is that person that is needed for others. If you have Energy that you use can make others giddy just being around you. Use that energy to turn people's frowns upside down! Use the secret! Be happy and others will feel the same way. You're also witty and clever, but don't use those natural abilities for evil!

 Cancer June 21 – July 22: To be honest, we all know that you can be just an itsy-bit self-centered. Stop doing things for just you, do things for others just because you can, not because you have to. You can be caring, so push those strong feelings of self-desire and look out to others who need help. Sharing is caring.

 Leo July 23 – August 22: The lion! The hard core, loving, possessive lion! This month is full of giving, so use your special trait and give until you can't give any more. Be confident in yourself, like what Demi Lovato says, "What's wrong with being confident?" Just don't let your ambitions get to far ahead of the rest of your thoughts.

 Virgo August 23 – September 22: Being analytical isn't always a good thing, if anything, being analytical can make some annoyed because it makes them feel less and less intelligent around you. However, you can be very helpful and reliable to people. Use your analytical side to be precise and help others.

 Libra September 23 – October 22: The diplomatic, graceful Libra. You are happy and can help others with your encouraging words. Be idealistic in a good way, don't be vain and you will have a great time where ever you go. Try to be more reliable to those who desperately need you and even those who don't.

 Scorpio October 23 – November 21: You are full of passion for those who you care about. Use that passion to make the best out of your time in your life.
